Interesting start to the season. I think that we found out pretty quick that there is a definite difference in practice and meet intensity. We saw the surprise on your faces. Fortunately, many of us realized this and cranked it up a notch or two. There is a considerable amount of talent on this team. The question is...is it going to be brought forth? Make sure that the details are sharp and technically sound. It is the little things (habits) that will allow for you to reach your potential.

I believe that were not ready mentally to race top to bottom. I should have been on deck with you and not on the other side calling the meet. It is fortunate that our mishaps did not factor significantly to the end result. Remember, the clock is your opponent no matter who your opponent. However, for the first dual meet we saw some vast improvements from the time trials. Trust in the process. Commit to what the coaches are wanting you to know and do, and then do it to the best of your ability. It is fun to race/dive fast.

If I have ever made any valuable discoveries, it has been owing more to patient attention than to any other talent.

I think that it is safe to say that they are not what they used to be. I appreciate your effort in the beginning where we jumped out to a fast start. Your energy was great. Make no mistake, we cannot swim to the ability of your opponent, when you know the meet is in hand. Ask yourself this, what purpose does this serve? Meet days are for racing and finding out what we can do. Find a way to keep your edge. If your competition is not what you thought, relax and shift your focus on the clock. What is exciting about today is the pride. It means more than you think.

I am not sure what to think about this meet. On one hand we simply took care of business by our depth. This is the first step to a conference championship. On the other hand, we were beat pretty good by their talent. Coach and I thought that as a team, we were flat or not mentally ready. However, we had some moments shine brighter than others. Remember, there are no time outs in this sport, so your mind set should be to do your best in the event you are in...in that moment. That is being a good teammate. I feel like we are going to learn this the hard way. The problem is, when you learn it...it may be too late. Take ownership now!

I will be honest, I thought that we might not make it out of there tonight. I cannot stand the delays to a contest, any contest. Weather or injury is one thing, but this was neither. I believe that these slow downs are instrumental to your ability to focus and do your best. Look, we need to be sharp. We need to hold each other accountable. If we do, we are going to make some real noise. Yes, we won, but how do you rate your effort? Does it need work? Your body tells without a sound what your effort is. Is your effort worth imitating? I would like to see us move forward together. We can do this!

Coach and I felt like today was a good tune up for what lies ahead on Thursday. We are seeing some signs of improvement in technique. We must make a commitment to this in order to make the next drop in time. I am not sure if this was from the thought of "don't hit your head"? Anyway, I want to encourage you to keep fine tuning your ability to swim/dive. If you do, the payoff is going to be awesome. It is the pursuit of excellence. Heck, we have a trend setter amongst us...anyone ever swam the 600 yard event?. I know someone who has.

Congrats!!! That was HUGE! We did not win a single event end yet our strength of our team showed up with our depth together. Most everyone dropped and swam the water out of the pool. I wish I had a camera on both teams when I was announcing the results. Both were in disbelief. The adrenaline was running ramped through the pool. To think that you did this coming off of exams (some schools are already into the second semester). There should be a HUGE confidence builder. I am trying to think of a word to describe your efforts...oh yea...HUGE!

Hmm. This was a bit of a let down tonight. I don't mean the score. This is not a shock. I knew that this would be a challenge considering what happen last week and being out of sink with the snow day. I appreciate your efforts making the streak continue knowing that we are not 100% healthy. We need to be selfish to this team. It is your role to make sure that we are as ready as we can be come next week both physically and mentally.

Congrats Gentlemen! MAC CHAMPS! Coach and I are extremely pleased for you and your efforts tonight. The way you stepped up and took control of the meet. You executed the plan. It is tough to rise up for a meet early in the week versus end of the week. Let's face it, we are not total healthy at this moment. You have accomplished what many ahead of you have not. We have been close too many times but to bust through like this is awesome. It is a commitment to excellence. Job well done!

Food for Thought:

We must look for the opportunity in every difficulty instead of being paralyzed at the thought of the difficulty in every opportunity.

Solid efforts tonight. Coach and I knew that they were going to come out firing from the beginning. It is hard to come back in 48 hours to challenge yet another rival. I was pleased that you held your ground and then controlled the meet. (We even won the "no school" call too). Have confidence in what we are doing. We have come a long way this season. Rest up. These next two weeks will go by quickly. Now is that time that we need to "dot the i's and cross the t's". Our goals are within reach, we can do this, together. We are almost through the tunnel. Eyes on the light.

Food for Thought:
Don't talk, just act. Don't say, just show. Don't promise, just prove.

Congratulations on an undefeated dual meet season!. I have to do some research on when the last time that has occurred. We tried a couple of things to keep our options open or what might work going into the division meet. There were some interesting results that have come about. Something to think about as we push for the division meet. Be confident in what you are doing in the pool and on the board. This team is ready to make a big drop, are you?
